

Invitation to the course PILOT Course 'Women, peace and security (WPS): looking at the Western Balkans and the MENA region'

Thessaloniki, 13 June 2024

The Department of International and European Studies at the University of Macedonia in Thessaloniki, under the auspices of the European Security and Defence College (ESDC), has the pleasure and honour of organising the pilot edition of the course 'Women, Peace and Security (WPS): looking at the Western Balkans and the MENA region'. The course will be held in Thessaloniki, Greece, from 2 to 6 September 2024 (residential format) and is being organised in cooperation with the UNESCO Chair on Women, Peace and Security of the University of Macedonia, hosted by the same department

The pilot course aims to raise awareness and evaluate the implementation of the WPS policy agenda throughout its development over more than two decades by the UN and other organisations, including the EU, through the EU Strategic Approach to WPS and the EU Action Plan on WPS 2019-2024. The course will focus on the Western Balkans and the MENA region as environments that have been affected by conflict and composite vulnerabilities and in which the EU is currently making efforts to build peace resilience. Participants will have the opportunity to gain knowledge about the significance of WPS in building state resilience, to evaluate good practices in the regions and to think differently about ways of optimising the WPS agenda's instruments within the EU policy framework, in order to bolster women's resilience and agency in peacebuilding in the regions through CSDP missions and operations.

In addition to the residential section of the course, there is also an e-learning module, and both are compulsory. All participants should be mid- to senior level officials or experts (civilian (including diplomats), police and military), and they will be invited to create a network of personnel working in the field of promoting the WPS agenda within the EU and at regional and global levels.
